Dear Burt,

I am terribly sorry that our delivery has been so poor on the documents which you have requested. I fear we made the error of ordering them through regular channels.

We have now made arrangements to have the third order (26) and the fourth order (42) microfilmed from the Library of Congress copies. Fifteen of the third order are now on their way to you on microfilm, which takes about a week for us to make, depending on the size of the order.

We have also phoned Dayton, Ohio, to get your first (160) and second (100) orders filled on a priority basis. We expect the first delivery this week, but if the delivery is small we shall proceed with microfilming the entire request. Should we microfilm the entire order, we will start with the second one (100) in hopes that our initial order to Dayton might be filled in the meantime. However, if you have special need for any particular documents, or if one of these four orders is more important than the others, please let us know.

I hope that our new attempt will be more successful.

Yours sincerely,

SIGNED
Dick
